The pension scheme problem – the deficit

- Many UK pension schemes currently have a deficit
- Primarily caused by falling equity markets, lower expected future investment returns and increasing life expectancy
- Companies can no longer walk away from their pension promises
- The shortfall will have to be made good at some point

A pension solution - background

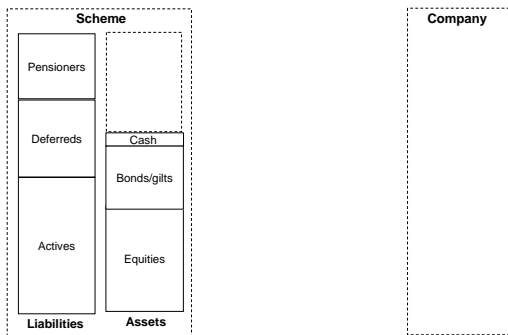

- The solution is based on an idea first proposed by Fischer Black in 1981
- The principles of the idea are:
 - No change in the financial position of the combined entity (firm plus pension fund)
 - But there are tax advantages
 - And some cost savings
- There are a number of conditions needed for this to work

Why do it and what are the implications?

human resource services | PricewaterhouseCoopers

Why do it?

- There are tax savings
 - Debt interest payments receive tax relief ie reduce tax bill
- Good PR with employees
 - Confidence of receiving benefits
- Reduce costs
 - Reduce PPF levy
- Gross roll up
 - Gross roll up in the pension scheme versus net in the company
- There can be initial cash flow savings
 - Depends on how you organise debt

But

- Exchanging known flexible funding for prescriptive funding
- Need to satisfy the previous criteria
