What is the Board supposed to do?

- To represent the interests of the general insurance actuarial community both within and outside the actuarial profession
- To provide direction to the General insurance actuarial community
- To be a key agent for the general insurance actuarial profession, to the benefit of all stakeholders, including general insurance businesses themselves.
- Facilitate two-way communication between general insurance actuaries, the wider profession, and representative bodies of other stakeholders.
- Monitoring and reviewing the impact of general insurance actuaries on general insurance actuaries and other related stakeholders, and responding accordingly.
- Promoting, monitoring, reviewing, responding to general insurance actuaries, so that users of said actuaries services can be assured that said actuaries are capable of delivering the services required.
- Promoting the activities of general insurance actuaries, identifying opportunities for other such activities, promoting higher level of general insurance actuaries work in order to deliver a wider range of services.
